~In Nigeria

- On February 19th, 2018, members of a Boko Haram faction entered the town of Dapchi and ordered 110 schoolgirls into trucks. Just over a year later, one of these girls remains in captivity because of her Christian faith. The original attack reflected the group's opposition to any formal education. However, one of the surviving girls, Leah Sharibu, was denied freedom from captivity because of her faith. Even still, Leah refused to compromise. In October, they issued a statement that Leah would be kept as a "slave for life". Since then, there has been little to no communication about her. Please join with others to pray for Leah's safe release. May the Lord use this teen unwavering testimony to encourage other believers to stand strong.
